

OWD-MARION SHOOTING.

RS. MARION WITHDRAWS HER COMPLAINT AGAINST MRS. DOWD.

Two Aviators Weep in Each Other's Arms and Kiss Each Other in Jefferson Arms Police Court—They Finally Leave the Court Room Arm in Arm.

The case of Mrs. Henrietta Dowd of 53 West Twenty-fourth street, who was charged with having a loaded pistol at Mrs. Lillian Swain of Dr. Daly's company, just outside the stages door of the theater on the night of Feb. 3, ended in a manner that was surprising, especially for Prof. George H. Swain, the father of the complainant, in the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday afternoon. The case had been adjourned several times, and it was said that Mrs. Marion wanted to withdraw the complaint. Her father protested that his daughter's reputation had been smirched, and he wanted to press the complaint to the bitter end. He was in court yesterday with his daughter and a lawyer, A. H. Kaffenbush of Howe & Hummel's office.

Mrs. Marion wore a sealink coat, and violet in her bonnet. Mrs. Dowd, who was fashionably clad, carried a large bunch of red roses in her hand. When the case was called before the court room, the two women glared at each other many times, after which they sat down on a bench and talked for half an hour. Mrs. Marion said she wanted to withdraw the case, and Mrs. Dowd agreed to do so.

Mr. Kaffenbush granted the request of both, left the court room. His daughter held him in her arms, and the two women glared at each other. Then, to the astonishment of the court officers and lawyers, Mrs. Marion threw herself into her assailant's arms, and they kissed each other. After such a scene, the two women glared at each other again, and then went out of the private rooms and stood nervously pinching at the roses which had been held in their hands. They had been estranged for many months, and now, after a long silence, they had come together again.

Mr. Kaffenbush, however, did not intend to shoot at her," said Lawyer Friend.

Mrs. Marion said that Mrs. Dowd fired in the air. She had been shot, and never met the defendant but once before the shooting, and she had no reason why Mrs. Dowd should seek to harm her.

Mr. Kaffenbush and Magistrate Branin, "In the statement you made on Feb. 4, you swore that Mrs. Dowd had pointed and discharged a loaded pistol at you."
